Are Global Elites Conspiring to Usher in a New World Order?

Sivbert SANGWA • November 12, 2024

In recent years, we have observed the rapid convergence of socio-political and economic agendas that appear to prioritize a centralized authority—a potential shift to a "New World Order." This concept resonates deeply with biblical prophecy and apocalyptic visions. For believers, the idea of a global power shift isn't surprising; it echoes age-old warnings from scripture. The Bible has long cautioned about entities working behind the scenes, aligning with dark powers, to establish an empire that suppresses individual freedoms and enforces a one-world system, often referred to as Babylon the Great. This notion isn't confined to conspiracy theories but touches upon biblical teachings about deception in the last days and the appearance of the Antichrist. As we examine the current landscape, it's crucial to discern truth from deception and reflect on how these events align with prophetic scripture. For Christians, this discussion takes on profound spiritual significance, challenging us to stay vigilant and grounded in our faith amidst rapidly changing global dynamics.

The phrase "New World Order" has been part of political discourse for decades. In 1991, U.S. President George H.W. Bush famously said, "What is at stake is more than one small country, it is a big idea, a new world order where diverse nations are drawn together in common cause to achieve the universal aspirations of mankind" (Bush, 1991). This statement could be understood as a vision of global cooperation and shared values; however, beneath the surface lies a more sinister plan.

While some may see it as a positive step towards international collaboration, those with a discerning eye view it with suspicion, fearing it could lead to a loss of national sovereignty or individual freedoms. In fact, the global elites have a multifaceted plan for global domination, using global crises or social unrest as opportunities to reshape societal structures according to their own agendas (WEF Insider, 2024). Current trends suggest that the elites have assessed the current landscape and concluded that now is the time to throw the world into turmoil, ignite civil unrest, and usher in the long-awaited new world order.

The Elites' Vision for a New World Order: Manipulating Chaos for Control

One method often cited in discussions about the New World Order is the manipulation of chaos to facilitate control. Klaus Schwab, founder of the World Economic Forum, and Bill Gates, a prominent billionaire, have both spoken about the need for global governance to address worldwide crises. Schwab has frequently expressed the idea of a global reset, an idea that alludes to taking the crises to restructure economies and societies (Schwab, 2020). As Schwab puts it, they are running out of time: "What wonderful opportunity to conclude our week here with such concrete proposals and ideas of how we can really create, I would say, a new world order (Klaus Schwab, 2017).

In similar language, Gates has commented on the possibility of civil unrest in the U.S., warning of deep polarization and societal rifts that could lead to violence if left unchecked (Business Insider, 2022). In both Klaus Schwab and Bill Gates' languages, observers have noted a recurring theme of "building back better" and implementing a "Great Reset", reflecting an agenda to shape society's future through coordinated efforts, often without democratic input. In this vision, global governance and economic restructuring promise stability—but at what cost? The Bible warns about deception and manipulative "peace" agreements in the end times (1 Thessalonians 5:3), cautioning believers to be vigilant against any unifying promises that obscure spiritual realities.

It's no coincidence that the French president echoed the same sentiment: "We need a single global order" (Emmanuel Macron). Prime Minister Narendra Modi also advocated for a similar vision: "This will be India's framework during India's G20 presidency. It will be our goal to ensure there is no first world or third world. It will be only one world." Consider also Becky Anderson's pointed question: "Are you ready for a new world order?"

A major recurring concern is that global elites may be manipulating political processes to install compliant leaders who align with their New World Order objectives. For example, the concept of a "new world order" has recently become a recurring theme in many world leaders' speeches, often appearing under various synonyms such as "globalization", "globalism", "global cooperation," "multinationalization," "multilateralism", "global order," or "new era." This rhetoric has been employed by figures like Augusto Lopez-Claros (2024), Brazilian President Lula (2023), UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres (2023), and U.S. President Joe Biden (2023), just to say a few. Could that be a coincidence?

The Eastern world has increasingly expressed concerns about current global shifts and advocated for multipolarization. China's President Xi Jinping urges the world to embrace a new global system he calls "true multilateralism": "All countries, especially large ones, should strive for true multilateralism and an equal multipolar world"(Xi Jinping, 2021). This sentiment is echoed by Russian President Putin, who, during his state visit to China, thanked Xi for input on Ukraine and called for a "multipolar world order"(Putin, 2024). In September 2024, Russian Federation Minister for Foreign Affairs also addressed the UN General Debate, 78th Session, where he stated: "Our planet is experiencing irreversible changes. Right in front of our eyes, a 'new world order' is being born. Our future is being shaped by a struggle between the global majority in favor of a fairer distribution of global benefits and civilized diversity, and the few who wield neocolonial methods of subjugation to maintain their slipping domination."(Sergey Lavrov, 2024). Wang Yi, China's Foreign Minister, has echoed the sentiments of his counterparts, promoting a vision of international relations based on mutual respect and cooperation: "We are also embracing a world full of hope. Multipolarity and globalization have become the unstoppable trend of our times"(Wang Yi, 2024). Months later, following Trump's reelection, Putin further re-emphasized concern for the ongoing shift: "These two decades were filled with the most important, some dramatic events of truly historical scale. Before our very eyes, a completely 'new world order' is being formed, unlike what we know from the past, for example, the Westphalian or the Yalta system. New powers are rising, ..."(Putin, 2024).

The 78th session of the UN General Assembly in 2024 saw a convergence of global leaders advocating for a "new international order". Representatives from various nations, including the United States, China, Russia, and several developing countries, emphasized the need for a more inclusive and "multipolar world system". Their speeches highlighted the importance of addressing global development challenges amidst ongoing crises, calling for enhanced cooperation and a restructuring of international institutions. Key themes included the promotion of "inclusive economic globalization", the establishment of a "Multinational Security Support Mission", and the creation of a "new era for peace". Many leaders stressed the necessity of a more centralized system to effectively tackle (what they call) global issues such as climate change, pandemics, inequality, and security threats. This unified call for a "new global paradigm", while framed as a path to greater stability and equity, raises questions about its alignment with biblical prophecies concerning end-times global governance (UN, 2023).

The signing of the "Pact for the Future" in September 2024 at the UN Summit of the Future has raised significant concerns. This pact, along with its appendices, outlines a framework for international cooperation that could lead to a loss of national sovereignty. Of particular concern are provisions for a "global emergency platform" and an "international pandemic instrument," which could potentially be activated in response to any potential modern human-engineered crises, from health emergencies to climate-related disasters. Critics argue that these mechanisms, while ostensibly designed for rapid global response, could be used to bypass traditional democratic processes and impose top-down governance. The pact's language on "digital cooperation" and "new agenda for peace" has also sparked debates about data privacy and economic sovereignty. Essentially, world leaders have designed a system where any declared global crisis could trigger the activation of a centralized global governance structure, potentially sidestepping individual nations' decision-making processes. This development aligns eerily with biblical warnings about a future global system that will have unprecedented control over nations and individuals (Revelation 13:7-8).

These global developments align with the previously discussed plans for a new world order. The World Economic Forum's "Great Reset" initiative and the UN's "Agenda 2030" promote centralized governance and economic restructuring. Central banks' push for digital currencies echoes predictions of a unified global currency, while interfaith dialogues suggest movement towards religious unification. The escalating tensions in the Middle East, particularly surrounding Israel, mirror Albert Pike's predictions of a potential global conflict. These trends underscore the need for vigilant assessment of global events that seem to promote unified systems of governance, economy, and faith - setting the stage for the potential emergence of a one-world government and religion.

Setting the Stage for a Global Religion

Part of the New World Order vision involves unifying humanity under a common spiritual and moral framework. The global elites are gearing up for the global transition from a system of sovereign nation states to an authoritarian new World Order with a One world government and One World religion uniting humanity in slavery. Gates, along with others in elite circles, seems to recognize the need for spiritual elements in governance—a view that aligns ominously with Bible prophecies about a future where humanity is forced to worship a centralized figure, the Antichrist (Revelation 13:15). This prophetic warning describes a time when coercive power will seek total allegiance, using both spiritual manipulation and technological means to enforce worship. According to Gates (2024), in a future in which humanity is united by One World Governments, all of the world's problems will be solved and humanity will need a One World religion to meet its spiritual needs:

> "The potential positive path is so good that it will force us to rethink how should we use our time. You know, you can almost call it a new religion or a new philosophy of OK, how do we stay connected with each other, not addicted to these things that will make video games look like nothing in terms of the attractiveness of spending time on them. So it's fascinating that we will the issues of, you know, disease and enough food of climate, If things go well, those will largely become solved problems"(Bill Gates, 2024).

The timing is striking, isn't it? The global elite are intensifying their propaganda efforts, aiming to lure the unsuspecting and vulnerable with false promises of a worldwide utopia under their leadership and that of their chosen figureheads. Unfortunately for the sheeple, in reality the global elite are planning to activate centuries old plans to spark World War Three and usher in the New World Order.

In 1871, American Freemason Albert Pike wrote a letter outlining three world wars. His description of the first two world wars were eerily accurate, lending credence to his prediction of a third world war in the 21st century. Given this context, it may be worthy considering his statements about the third world war. Regarding this conflict, the letter states:

> "The Third World War must be fomented by taking advantage of the differences caused by the 'agentur' of the Illuminati between the political Zionists and the leaders of the Islamic world. The war must be conducted in such a way that Islam and political Zionism mutually destroy each other. Meanwhile, the other nations, once more divided on this issue, will be constrained to fight to the point of complete physical, moral, spiritual and economic exhaustion." (Pike, 1871).

Could Albert Pike have been foretelling 2024? His writings align eerily with today's events. Current events in the Middle East, especially rising tensions around Israel, seem to echo Pike's predictions. The implications are not lost on those who believe the New World Order might seek a conflict of this magnitude to justify complete societal restructuring. Zionist Israeli seem to understand their role in establishing the One World government. They predict that as global chaos intensifies, people worldwide will eventually turn to the elites, pleading for a new world order to restore stability. This concept aligns with Jewish eschatological Messianic predictions. Prominent rabbis have described the coming of the Mashiach (Messiah) as ushering in a new world order with a unified government. Rabbi Mendel Kessin suggests this order will require dismantling existing global systems to make way for "one kingdom" under divine rule (Kessin, 2024). While this expectation carries profound spiritual significance for many, it raises concerns for Christians. The Bible warns of a final, global government under the Antichrist that will initially promise peace but ultimately reveal itself as an oppressive regime (Daniel 7:23-25).

Concluding Thoughts

The elites' pursuit of centralized power may seem practical, promising solutions to humanity's greatest challenges. However, this vision could lead to widespread control, spiritual compromise, and the suppression of personal freedoms. By viewing these plans through a biblical lens, Christians can respond with wisdom, prayer, and confidence in God's ultimate sovereignty. Let's remember Jesus' words: "See, I have told you beforehand" (Matthew 24:25). Though worldly powers may obscure the truth, it remains unchanged, illuminating the path for all who seek it.
As Christians, we're called to expose such sinister agendas, helping the world avoid these traps. Ephesians 5:11 reminds believers to "take no part in the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather expose them." In a world that often dismisses discussions of spiritual deception as conspiracies, Christians must recognize and unveil the works of darkness operating through worldly power structures. This task requires discernment, prayer, and commitment to biblical truth. By examining the agendas promoted by global elites, we can better understand how these align with prophetic warnings about end-times deception (2 Thessalonians 2:3-4).
